- The Narcotics Subpanel Report was rewritten on 29 March based upon inputs from the Panel members. It's a much better report, however, it still needs some work, particularly format and structure. We'll concentrate on these aspects of the report over the next few days and then coordinate the report as required.

Terrorism:

- The second draft of the Terrorism Working Group's report was distributed to Working Group members on Monday, 2 April. The Working Group will meet Friday, 6 April to review this version.

- The Working Group report is nearing completion and the FLASHBOARD development seems well on track. We now need to consider what should be the nature of the CIPC's continuing commitment to terrorism intelligence. Should our role be an enduring one, a la narcotics? Should we drop the matter entirely, in favor of the IICT and NIO/CT? Is some intermediate option appropriate? We should consider these questions in light of the CIPC's mission, its recourse limitations, and our aspirations for its future agenda. We have at least another month or two of work remaining before we could possibly bow out of the terrorism business in good conscience so we need not decide immediately, but should start thinking about our future involvement.

DABM Study:

- The main body of the report is in the final stages of typing:
 - The Executive Summary of the report was also in its final stages of completion, however, to ensure that the report was effectively addressing the problem, I requested that talk with and review what had been completed to date. As a result of this meeting, provided some excellent suggestions and observations. Consequently, the Executive Summary is being revised. I've instructed [] that the DABMs Report must be completed this week, otherwise Dr. [] panel will have concluded its efforts before the DABMs report is published.
